ARLINGTON, Texas — OmniSource United, Inc.'s Radar Tires has opened two additional U.S. distribution centers, one in Knoxville, Tenn., and the other Parkesburg, Pa., tripling the number of U.S.-based warehouses for the tire brand owner.

Both new locations are in existing buildings. Radar Tires also has a D/C in Texas.

Radar said the expansion "is part of the brand's ongoing commitment to improving product accessibility and better serving its growing network of distributors and retailers" across the U.S.

"Stocking domestic tire inventory is a key part of the Radar strategy going forward," said Rob Montasser, vice president of sales for Radar Tires USA. "It ensures our distributors and retailers have easy access to the products that their customers need, without the long lead times or supply chain uncertainty. These new locations allow us to be faster, more flexible and more dependable."

Radare said it is is looking at opening more D/Cs in the Midwest and the West Coast in the future.

Radar' said its "growing domestic footprint" reflects its continued investment in customer experience and its "long-term vision to build one of the most efficient and responsive tire distribution networks in the industry."

OmniSource United is a subsidiary of Omni United (S) Pte. Ltd. Radar Tires offer a range of passenger and light truck tires and are sold in more than 80 countries.
